Human Rights Education at the German Education Server

Frankfurt / Main. The Eduserver now offers to its international users an English language site on human rights policy and education, see www.eduserver.de/zeigen\_e.html?seite=5784. Human rights constitute a major issue in both German and international development and education policies: the United Nations Declaration on Human Rights was signed in 1948, and it provides the framework for modern societies. Fundamental human rights and the right to education are subject to this thematic dossier, which provides access to official UN and EU declarations, German policy on human rights and the right to education as well as teaching resources. The website also offers links to non-governmental organisations and institutions active in human rights protection – all resources are described in English.

The German Education Server is a joint service by the federal government and the states. It is located at the German Institute for International Educational Research in Frankfurt on the Main and Berlin (DIPF), member of the Leibniz Association.

The DIPF institute is one of 84 non-university research institutes belonging to the Leibniz-Gemeinschaft. The scope of the Leibniz institutions is broad, it reaches from natural sciences to engineering, environment and economical and social sciences to space and philosophical sciences, including museums with their own research departments. The institutes are demand-oriented and interdisciplinary. They are of national importance, hence their projects are of federal interest and they are jointly financed by the federal and state governments.
